

For the three years of taking classes at the Ohio State University, this by far has been the most enjoyable class I have taken. Being an accounting major does not introduce me to many enjoyable classes. I remember seeing that I still needed an art credit course to fulfill a GE and felt that no matter what class I would pick, it wouldn't be of any interest to me, but I was wrong. Besides being a very interesting and enjoyable class, I actually learned a lot about digital editing that I hope to use later in my life.

For our final project we were tasked to create a research or informative website on something like a project we were currently working on in classes or something of major significance to us. Because I am an accounting major, I was not currently working on anything of significant interest to me this semester. So for my final project I decided to create a website on something that has been a big part of my entire life, the Cleveland Cavaliers. With the Cleveland Cavaliers as the focus of my project, I decided to create an informative website about playoff history of the franchise. The idea for this project came rather quickly to me when first learning about the project. I have been following the Cleveland Cavaliers my entire life so while I was creating the website and typing in the information it came quickly and easily to me. Most of the information I provided on the website was from memory and I required very little help from other websites. My pictures, however, weren't as easy as the information came, but wasn't at all hard to create. My goal for the website was hopefully to provide an informative website that could function well and be easy to navigate through.

When I first enrolled in this class, I only saw it as a class I was required to take to fulfill a requirement. Never would I have known that this class would have actually impacted me in the way that it has. In my personal life I am a big gamer. I enjoy playing video games with my friends and I hope continue doing this in the future. I use video games as my way of escaping from the realities of the real world. Another big thing for me is YouTube. If I'm not playing video games, you will probably find me on my phone or laptop watching YouTube videos. I remember a couple years ago in high school thinking of the idea of what it would be like to be a youtuber and if I could ever accomplish it. I fiddle back and forth with the idea of starting a YouTube channel throughout the past few years but what held me back was the fact that I had no idea what I was doing with digital editing. After taking this class, I found a real love for digital art and really fell in love with the video editing portion of the class. Having two friends of mine recently start their own YouTube channels made me want to start my own. All I needed was that little extra push to do it and this class has done it for me. So to answer the question of how I see myself utilizing the skills I learned from this class in the future and my field is that I'm sure how I could use this in my accounting career but I see significant use of this starting a whole new path for me in YouTube. Hopefully it pays off.

For never really having an interest in art before this class, it really has change my perspective of how I view art. Being challenged every week to represent a part of your own identity without words but through pictures has showed me how to how others express themselves through their own drawings and pictures. I now see how the colors of a drawing could represent the mood of the artist or how it is supposed to make you feel. How even the little things included in pictures have a purpose behind why they are included and how they represent part of the artist. I've learned to appreciate art more than I would have ever thought I would before this class.
