

Service In Columbus

Peter Elgin

- I had the opportunity to spend some time volunteering with two student organizations, Habitat for Humanity's OSU campus chapter and Crosswalk Outreach to the Homeless. With Habitat for Humanity, I was given the opportunity to help with preparing homes for families in the Columbus area (mainly construction-type work). With Crosswalk Outreach, I had the opportunity to help prepare and distribute lunches to homeless individuals living in Columbus.
- During my volunteering in both organizations, the target population were members of the Columbus community; more specifically homeless individuals through Crosswalk Outreach, and families in need of a home through Habitat for Humanity.

- As I volunteered with both organizations this year, I realized how much I could do for my community by simply committing some of my time to work with an organization, and making sure that I put in as much effort as I could while doing so. I was truly impressed with how much each organization was able to accomplish every time I had the opportunity to go out and work with them.
- You can find both organizations by searching for them at <https://activities.osu.edu/>
