

This creates a circular effect and feels playful to me. It reminds me of an advertisement from the 90s which makes me wonder if it is more representational than abstract. Although I also wonder if 90s is fun because they use abstract art.

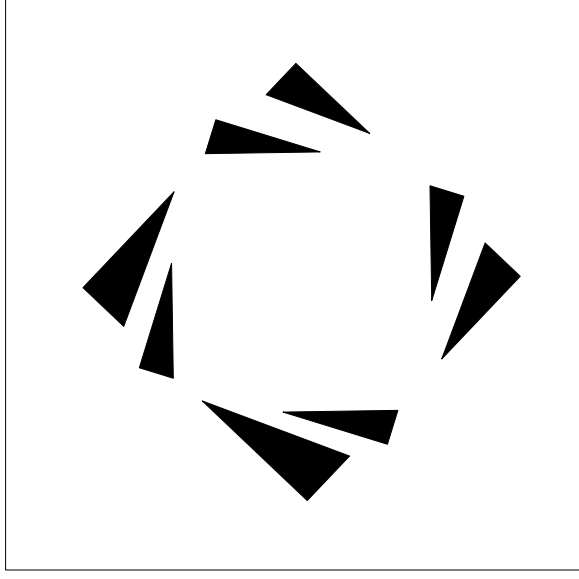

Even though I believe the spiral gives this a playful effect, I'm hesitant to think it's a strong choice because "round" and "spiral" don't immediately come to mind. I would say this design has something missing. Maybe that thing is less jagged edges or more details.

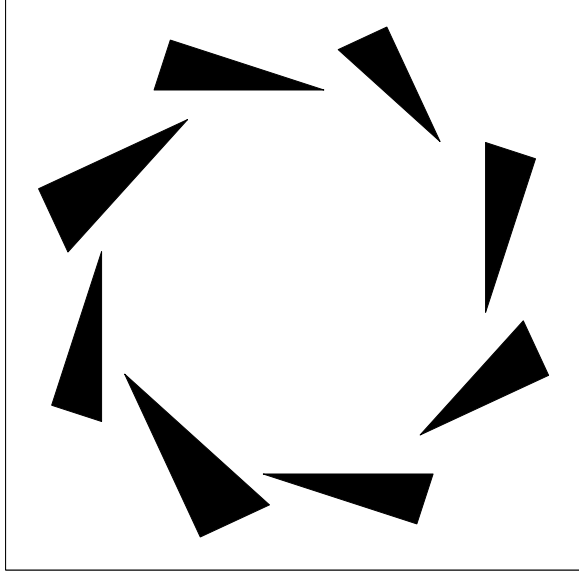

I really enjoy this design for "playful" not only because of its spiral, but the variation of black and white creates a "stack" effect through some depth. This may also be too representational however.

With this design I experimented with stacking without a specific stacking. This design seems a little too abstract to get a point across.

Although I am not sure this design fits well for any of the subject words for this project, I do really enjoy this design and hope to find a way to build upon and use this idea for a later project.

I am considering using this design for order. It directs your eyes in a circle through pointing triangles. I think this image is too "sharp" to be playful.